PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE OF LOUISIANA

Petitioner, STRICK CHAMBERS, prays that a writ of certiorari issue to review the judgment of the Supreme Court of Louisiana entered in the matter of "Strick Chambers v. Road District No. 505 of Tangipahoa Parish, Louisiana, et al,"

No. 50244 on the docket of said court on the 31st day of December, 1969, which judgment affirmed a judgment of the Twenty-First Judicial District Court in and for the Parish of Tangipahoa, State of Louisiana, maintaining the defendants' plea of peremption and dismissing the plaintiff's suit to enjoin the defendants from issuing bonds or imposing a tax pursuant to an election held on June 7, 1969, in Road District No. 505 of Tangipahoa Parish, Louisiana.

OPINIONS BELOW

The opinion of the Twenty-First Judicial District Court in and for the Parish of Tangipahoa, Louisiana, is not reported, and will not be published. (R. Vl. 1, P. 78) The opinion of the Supreme Court of Louisiana has not yet been published. (R. Vl. 2, P. 52) Both opinions are annexed hereto as an appendix to this petition.

JURISDICTION

This suit was filed by a resident, citizen and registered voter of the Parish of Tangipahoa, State of Louisiana, living within the area of Road District No. 505 of said Parish, but who did not own property subject to taxation therein, or elsewhere, against said Road District, the Police Jury of Tangipahoa Parish, Louisiana (the governing authority of the Road District), the individual members of the Police Jury, the Assessor of the Parish, and the Sheriff and Ex-Officio Tax Collector for the Parish, to enjoin the defendants from issuing bonds or imposing a tax pursuant to an election held on June 7, 1969, in the Road District, and to have declared unconstitutional, null and void Article 14, Section 14(a) of the Louisiana Constitution for the year 1921, and L.R.S. 39:508, requiring ownership of property subject to payment of property taxes as a condition of voting in the said election. It is contended that said provisions discriminate against plaintiff and others similarly situated, depriving them of their rights, privileges and immunities under the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. (R. Vl. 1, P. 1) The Supreme Court of Louisiana, the highest court of the State of Louisiana, affirmed the judgment of the trial court, and held that plaintiff's action was barred by virtue of the provisions of Article 14, Section 14(n) of the Louisiana Constitution and of L.R.S. 39:518, inasmuch as these constitutional and statutory provisions established a peremptory period of sixty (60) days from the date of the promulgation of the results of the election during which period suits could be brought to contest their validity, and that inasmuch as the plaintiff's action had not been filed until almost five (5) months after the promulgation peremption had run. (R. Vl. 2, P. 52)

Articles 591 through 597, inclusive, of the Louisiana Code of Civil Procedure authorize the filing of class actions. The right of the plaintiff to prosecute this suit is not contested.

The Supreme Court of the State of Louisiana initially rendered its decision on the 15th day of December, 1969. (R. Vl. 2, P. 52) Application for rehearing was timely filed by petitioner on the 22nd day of December, 1969, (R. Vl. 2, P. 56) and said application for rehearing suspended the finality of the decision of the Louisiana Supreme Court until that court denied the application for rehearing on the 31st day of December, 1969. (R. Vl. 2, P. 65) Louisiana Code of Civil Procedure, Articles 2166, 2167.

The jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States to review this decision is invoked under 28 U.S.C. Section 1257(3), the validity of constitutional and statutory provisions of the State of Louisiana being drawn in question on the ground that they are repugnant to the Constitution of the United States, and petitioner claiming rights, privileges and immunities under the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. Petitioner further contends that the Supreme Court of Louisiana has decided this case in a way which is probably not in accord with applicable decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States.

The Supreme Court of Louisiana did not consider the constitutional questions presented, as its decision was based solely on the fact that the plaintiff's suit was not brought within the sixty (60) day contest period established by state law.

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

The following questions are presented by the present appeal:

1) Whether the provisions of the Louisiana Constitution and Statutes permitting participation in property tax bond and property tax elections only by property taxpaying electors, and requiring that elections be carried by a majority of the votes cast and assessment voted are unconstitutional and in violation of the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States of America under the principles established by this Court in Kramer v. Union Free School District No. 15, et al, 395 U.S. 621, 89 S. Ct. 1886 (1969), and in Cipriano v. Houma, et al, 395 U.S. 701, 89 S. Ct. 1897 (1969).

2) In the event said provisions are held to be unconstitutional whether or not the decision of this Court will be given prospective application.

STATUTORY AND CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISIONS INVOLVED

1) This case involves the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, particularly the Equal Protection Clause, which provides as follows:

> "Section 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State where they reside. No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws."

2) This case also involves the following constitutional provisions of the law of Louisiana:

a) Article 14, Section 14(a) of the Louisiana Constitution of 1921:

> "(a) Municipal corporations, parishes and school, road, subroad, drainage, subdrainage (waterworks and subwaterworks) districts, hereinafter referred to as subdivisions of the State, may incur debt and issue negotiable bonds, when authorized by a vote of a majority in number and amount, of the property taxpayers qualified to vote under the Constitution and laws of this State, who vote at an election held for that purpose after notice published or posted for thirty (30) days in such manner as the Legislature may prescribe, and the governing authorities of such subdivisions shall impose and collect annually, in excess of all other taxes, a tax sufficient to pay the interest annually or semi-annually and the principal falling due each year, or such amount as may be required for any sinking fund necessary to retire said bonds at maturity; provided that the governing authority of any municipality which has established and is maintaining and supporting public schools of its own shall not be required to impose and collect such tax upon property included within any territory annexed to the municipality for the retirement of bonded indebtedness incurred by the municipality for school purposes prior to the annexation of such territory.

"(a) Municipal corporations, parishes and schools, road, subroad, sewerage, drainage and subdrainage districts, and irrigation districts, hereinafter referred to as subdivisions of the State, may incur debt and issue negotiable bonds, when authorized by vote of a majority in number and amount of the property taxpayers qualified to vote under the Constitution and laws of this State, who vote at an election held for that purpose after notice published or posted for thirty (30) days in such manner as the Legislature may prescribe, and the governing authorities of such subdivisions shall impose and collect annually, in excess of all other taxes, a tax sufficient to pay the interest annually or semi-annually and the principal falling due each year, or such amount as may be required for any sinking fund necessary to retire said bonds at maturity; provided that the governing authority of any municipality which has established and is maintaining and supporting public schools of its own shall not be required to impose and collect such tax upon property included within any territory annexed to the municipality for the retirement of bonded indebtedness incurred by the municipality for school purposes prior to the annexation of such territory."

b) Article 14, Section 14(n) of the Louisiana Constitution of 1921:

"For a period of sixty(60) days from the date of promulgation of the result of any election held under the provisions of this section, any person in interest shall have the right to contest the legality of such election, the bond issue provided for, or the tax authorized, for any cause; after which time no one shall have any cause or right of action to contest the regularity, formality, or legality of said election, tax provision, or bond authorization, for any cause whatsoever. If the validity of any election, special tax or bond issue authorized or provided for, held under the provisions of this section, is not raised within the sixty (60) days herein prescribed, the authority to issue the bonds, the legality thereof and of the taxes necessary to pay the same shall be conclusively presumed, and no court shall have authority to inquire into such matters. The provisions of this section shall not apply to the City of New Orleans."

3) This case further involves the following statutory provisions of the law of Louisiana:

"The governing authority of subdivisions are: (1) For parishes, road and sub-road districts and fire protection districts which do not include any municipal corporation within their limits, the police jury of the parish or the equivalent";

R.S. 39:501

"Except as otherwise provided in special cases, no subdivision may incur any debt, issue any bonds, levy any special tax, or assume any indebtedness unless it has been authorized by vote of a majority in number and amount of the property taxpayers qualified to vote under the constitution and laws of this state who vote at an election hereunder. The governing authority of any subdivision may call a special election for any of these purposes at any time; and it shall call an election for any of these purposes when requested so to do by the petition in writing of one-fourth of the property taxpayers eligible to vote at the election."

"Only property taxpayers qualified as electors under the constitution and laws of this state are entitled to vote in any election held under the provisions of this Part. The qualifications of taxpayers as voters are those of age, residence, and registration as voters, without regard to sex. There shall be no voting by proxy.

"With reference to Part IV of this Chapter if the limits and boundaries of any municipal corporation has been extended and the assessment roll that is to include the property in the extended limits has not already been made for the municipal corporation, those who have become property taxpayers by the extension of the limits and who are otherwise qualified to vote shall be permitted to vote in the election and the assessed valuation of their property shall be ascertained by reference to the last assessment roll of the parish."

"For a period of sixty days from the date of promulgation of the result of any election held under the provisions of this Part, any person in interest may contest the legality of the bond issue provided for, the tax authorized or the assumption of debt provided for any cause, after which time, no one may contest the legality, formality or regularity of the election or debt assumption for any cause whatsoever. If the validity of any election is not raised within the sixty days herein prescribed, the authority to issue the bonds, and to levy the tax, or assume the debt and the regularity thereof, shall be conclusively presumed, and no court shall have authority to inquire into such matters.

"With reference to Part III(A) of this Chapter, if any resolution adopted or proceeding had more than thirty days after the promulgation of the result of the election, no contest, action or proceeding to question the validity or legality of the resolution or proceeding so adopted shall be begun in any court by any person for any cause whatsoever, after the expiration of thirty days from the date when the resolution was adopted or proceeding had."

"If a majority in number and amount of the qualified property taxpayers voting at an election held under the provisions of this Chapter vote in favor of the proposition to incur debt and issue negotiable bonds, the governing authorities after promulgation of the result of the election, may by resolution authorize the issuance of the bonds, in an amount not exceeding the amount stated in the proposition, which bonds shall not be issued for any other purpose than that stated in the proposition."

"The governing authority of any subdivision issuing bonds hereunder shall impose and collect annually in excess of all other taxes, a tax on all the property subject to taxation by the subdivision sufficient in amount to pay the interest annually or semi-annually, and the principal falling due each year; provided that the governing authority of any municipality which has established and is maintaining and supporting public schools of its own, shall not be required to impose and collect such tax upon property included within any territory annexed to the municipality for the retirement of bonded indebtedness incurred by the municipality for school purposes prior to the annexation of such territory. The tax shall be levied and collected by the same officers, at the same time and in the same manner as the general taxes of the subdivision."

STATEMENT

Petitioner, Strick Chambers, brought this suit against Road District No. 505 of Tangipahoa Parish, Louisiana, and also against the Police Jury of the Parish as the governing authority thereof, and certain named officials of the Parish, challenging the validity and legality of a bond and tax election called by the governing authority of the Road District and held on June 7, 1969. (R. Vl. 1, P. 1)

The facts, as established by the pleadings, (Tr. Vl. 1, Pps. 1, 33, 34, 37) admissions (Vl. 1, P. 40) and the opinion of the Supreme Court (R. Vl. 2, P. 52) reveal that on April 18, 1969, the Police Jury of the Parish of Tangipahoa, Louisiana, ordered and called a special election to be held in Road District No. 505 on June 7, 1969, to authorize the incurring of debt and the issuance of bonds of said Road District to the amount of Eighty Thousand Dollars ($80,000.00). The election was duly held, and on June 10, 1969, the Police Jury, acting as the governing authority of the Road District, canvassed the returns and promulgated the results of the election, the promulgation disclosing that there was a majority of one hundred thirty-seven (137) votes in number representing an assessed valuation of $219,730 in amount cast in favor of the proposition submitted to the voters at the special election. The proces verbal of the canvass of the votes cast at the election and the promulgation of the result were duly published in the official journal in accordance with the provisions of L.R.S. 39:515.

The notice of the special election provided that the proposition therein contained was to be submitted to the resident property taxpayers of Road District No. 505 of Tangipahoa Parish, Louisiana, qualified and entitled to vote at said election under the Constitution and laws of the State of Louisiana. Article 14, Section 14(a) of the Louisiana Constitution of 1921, as amended, and L.R.S. 39:509 provide that only property taxpayers qualified as electors under the Constitution and laws of the State are entitled to vote in any election held under the provisions thereof. Neither the plaintiff, nor any other similarly situated and otherwise qualified nonproperty taxpaying voters were permitted or entitled to vote in the election. The appellant contends that he, and others similarly situated in his class, were deprived of their elective franchise in the election solely because of their failure to own property subject to taxation and to pay ad valorem property taxes thereon, and were thereby discriminated against in favor of persons who owned property subject to and paying taxes thereon. The plaintiff contends that the above provisions of the Constitution and Statutes of the State of Louisiana discriminate against plaintiff and others similarly situated, depriving him, and the members of his class, of their rights, privileges and immunities under the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and that these provisions of Louisiana law are therefore unconstitutional, null and void. It is plaintiff's contention that these provisions which exclude all qualified voters except registered property taxpayers in a general obligation bond and tax election are not exclusions which are necessary to promote a compelling state interest, and that the interest of the property taxpayer in a general obligation tax bond election is no more substantial or greater than the interest of the registered voter who does not own taxable property in the Road District.

Plaintiff prayed that the defendants be enjoined from issuing bonds or imposing a tax pursuant to said election on the ground that the acts of the defendant are in contravention of plaintiff's rights, privileges and immunities under the Equal Protection and Due Process Clauses of the Fourteenth Amendment.

The defendants filed a peremptory exception of prescription to the plaintiff's petition relying on Article 14, Section 14(n) of the Louisiana Constitution and L.R.S. 39:518, above quoted, contending that it was apparent on the face of the plaintiff's petition that his suit was prescribed by the sixty (60) day prescriptive period set forth in said provision. (R. Vl. 1, P. 33) The defendants also filed an answer to plaintiff's petition in which all of the essential allegations relating to the manner in which the election was called and conducted, and the result thereof was admitted, but in which it was denied that there was any invalidity attached to the election. (R. Vl. 1, P. 37) The defendants prayed that the plaintiff's suit be dismissed at his costs.

The case was submitted to the trial court on a stipulation of facts (R. Vl. 1, P. 40) which was substantially in accord with the factual allegations contained in plaintiff's petition with respect to the calling, conduct and promulgation of the election, and the trial court sustained the plea of peremption and/or prescription, and dismissed the plaintiff's suit. (R. Vl. 1, P. 78, P. 92)

Plaintiff perfected an appeal to the Supreme Court of Louisiana, (R. Vl. 1, P. 93) and on December 15, 1969 that Court affirmed the judgment of the trial court. (R. Vl. 2, P. 52) Plaintiff timely applied for a rehearing, (R. Vl. 2, P. 46) which was denied on January 13, 1969. (R. Vl. 2, P. 65)

HOW THE FEDERAL QUESTIONS WERE PRESENTED

In the original petition filed in the trial court by the plaintiff, the applicant herein, the following allegations were made:

"7. Under the provisions of the aforesaid constitutional and statutory provisions, as well as the notice of election issued by the said Police Jury pursuant to such authority, neither plaintiff nor any other similarly situated and otherwise qualified non-property taxpayer voters were permitted or entitled to vote in said election.

"8. Plaintiff and others similarly situated in his class were deprived of the elective franchise in the above-mentioned election held in Road District No. 505 of Tangipahoa Parish, Louisiana, solely because of their failure to own property subject to taxation and to pay ad valorem property taxes thereon, and were thereby discriminated against in favor of persons who own property to be subject to and pay taxes thereon.

"9. The provisions of the Constitution and Statutes of the State of Louisiana hereinabove enumerated, which have the effect of requiring ownership of property subject to and payment of property taxes as a condition of voting in the aforementioned election, discriminate against plaintiff and others similarly situated, depriving them of their rights, privileges and immunities under the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States and are therefore unconstitutional, null and void.

"10. Petitioner further avers that under the decisions of the United States Supreme Court in KRAMER VS. UNION FREE SCHOOL DISTRICT NO. 15, 2 Cir., 1967, 379 F. 2d 491; 282 F. Supp. 70 (1968), and in JOSEPH Q. CIPRIANO VS. CITY OF HOUMA, ET AL., 89 Sup. Ct. 1897, when properly interpreted, the provisions of the Louisiana Constitution and statutory provisions which exclude all qualified voters except registered property taxpayers in a general obligation bond election are not such exclusions which are necessary to promote a compelling state interest; and that the interest of the property taxpayer in general obligation bond elections is no more substantial or greater than the interest of the registered voter who does not own real estate in the said Road District.

"11. In the Cipriano case, supra, invalidating a revenue bond election where only qualified taxpaying electors were permitted to vote the court recognized the prescriptive or peremptive provisions of the State of Louisiana, and in this respect made the ruling that the court would apply the decision only where, under state law, the time for challenging the election result had not expired.

"In the latter connection petitioner shows that in the present case as to the bonds authorized the prescriptive or peremptive provisions of the Louisiana law expired on the 18th day of August, 1969, subsequent to June 16, 1969, the date of the Cipriano decree." (R. V. 1, Pps. 3, 4)

Further in the petition it was alleged with respect to the tax authorized at said election, and imposed by the Police Jury pursuant thereto as follows:

"13. That in pursuance to the election held on June 7, 1969, as shown, and acting upon the authority of the constitutional and statutory law presently governing such elections, the said Police Jury adopted on November 12, 1969, an authorizing resolution imposing five mills in ad valorem taxes upon all the owners of taxable property in said Road District, to provide the principal of and interest on the bonds authorized.

"14. As is shown in all of the foregoing proceedings, the said bonds are to be issued and sold at an interest rate which is not in excess of 6% per annum, and upon information and belief petitioner alleges that there will be an increase in millage upon all of the taxable property of the District or from eight to ten mills, as is allowed under these laws.

"15. The said Police Jury by the action taken, as shown, and by such further action as will be required, in pursuance to the Constitution and Statutes of Louisiana, has and will deprive plaintiff of his rights under the due process and equal protection clauses of the Fourteenth Amendment of the United States Constitution and under Article I, Sections 2 and 6 of the Louisiana Constitution." (R. V. 1, Pps 4, 5)

REASONS FOR GRANTING THE WRIT

The basic issue in this case is whether or not the provisions of the Louisiana Constitution and Statutes which limit the franchise in general obligation tax bond elections to property taxpayers qualified as electors and which further require that the proposition submitted be carried by a majority in number of votes and assessment voted are repugnant to the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution.

It is the applicant's position that the cases of Cipriano v. City of Houma, et al., 395 U.S. 701, 89 S. Ct. 1897; 23 Lawyers Edition 2d 647, and Kramer v. Union Free School Dist. No. 15, 395 U.S. 621; 89 S. Ct. 1886, 23 Lawyers Edition, 2d 583, have invalidated the Louisiana Constitutional and Statutory provisions requiring a taxpayers election and weighted voting in general obligation tax bond elections.

In the Kramer case, supra, this court voided a New York statute which excluded from the electorate in school district elections certain electors who were otherwise eligible to vote in state and federal elections where a school board member for the district was to be elected. In the Cipriano case the court held that the provisions of Louisiana law giving only property taxpaying electors the right to vote in a utility revenue bond election were unconstitutional. Both of these cases recognized the principles that if a challenged state statute grants a right to vote in a limited purpose election to some otherwise qualified voters and denies it to others, the court must determine whether the exclusions are necessary to promote a compelling state interest, and if the state's sole justification for the statute is that the classification provides a rational basis for limiting the franchise to those voters with a special interest, the statute does not meet the exacting standards of precision required of statutes which selectively distribute the franchise.

It is the applicant's position that no compelling state interest is promoted by the limitation of the franchise in elections of this kind, and that the interest of the property taxpayer in general obligation tax bond elections is no more substantial or greater than the registered voter who does not own real property or other property subject to ad valorem taxation in the state in that:

(1) Such restriction upon the voting franchise represents a direct dilution of the weight of the taxpayer's vote in that the vote of a property owner who has a large assessment is more effective and carries greater weight than the vote of a property owner with less assessed valuation.

(2) The applicant who is a qualified elector who does not own real or personal property subject to assessment in the Road District, and others similarly situated, are equally interested in, and materially affected by the Road District's decisions and fiscal policies, and as members of the community have an interest in the quality and structure of roads in the area, which are inseparably interwoven into the total economic picture of the area.

This court in the Cipriano case held that the rule established by that case would apply prospectively, "only where, under state law, the time for challenging the election result has not expired or in cases brought within the time specified by state law for challenging the election and which are not yet final." The date of that decision was June 16, 1969. Although that case involved only the procedures established by Louisiana law for the conduct of revenue bond elections, it is clear that the decision applies to all types of bond elections, including the type of tax bond election challenged in the present case. Since the authorization to issue the bonds of Road District No. 505 was not legally complete on June 16, 1969, the Supreme Court of Louisiana was in error in sustaining the sixty (60) day prescriptive period with respect to the filing of a suit to contest the election as established by Article 14, Section 14(n) of the Louisiana Constitution, and L.R.S. 39:518, and was in error in affirming the judgment of the trial court dismissing the plaintiff's suit.

Applicant further shows that there is presently pending in this court a matter entitled "City of Phoenix, Arizona, et al, Appellant v. Emily Kolodziejski, Appellee," docket No. _____, which is on appeal from the United States District Court for the District of Arizona, presenting substantially similar questions to the questions presented by the present application.

CONCLUSION

The issues presented are substantial, relating to the basic constitutional right of the petitioner, and others similarly situated, to participate in decisions of political subdivisions within which they reside; the federal questions presented are of national importance, and this petition for a writ of certiorari should be granted, and this court should give plenary consideration to this case to resolve the issues herein presented, with briefs on the merits and oral argument, and a final decision by this high court.

VS.	:	COURT
ROAD DISTRICT NO. 505 OF	:	PARISH OF
TANGIPAHOA PARISH,	:	TANGIPAHOA
LOUISIANA, ET AL	:	STATE OF LOUISIANA

REASONS FOR JUDGMENT

The Police Jury of Tangipahoa Parish, acting as the governing authority of Road District No. 505 of Tangipahoa Parish, Louisiana, held a special bond and tax election to incur debt and to issue bonds in the sum of $80,000, on June 7, 1969. The election carried by a substantial majority both in the number of voters participating and in the total assessments involved, and thereafter, on June 10, 1969, these results were promulgated by the Police Jury and were published in the official journal of the District on June 19, 1969.

The proposal thus approved empowered the Police Jury as the governing authority of the Road District to impose a millage tax for the current year 1970, and from year to year thereafter, to provide essential funds to pay the principal of and interest on the bonds in accord with the proceedings, and in accordance with the Constitution and Laws of the State.

All of the proceedings in reference to the matter were carried out in compliance with Article XIV, Section 14(a) of the Louisiana Constitution, and L.R.S. 39:501, et seq.

The facts show that the bonds are now offered for public sale pursuant to a resolution adopted by the Police Jury on April 18, 1969, and that to anticipate debt service requirements the Police Jury as the governing authority of the District adopted a resolution on the 12th day of November, 1969, certifying to the Sheriff and Ex-Officio Tax Collector the levy of five (5) mills for the current year 1970, to provide essential funds to pay the principal of and interest on the bonds under the maturity schedule.

It is admitted that the petitioner is a duly qualified elector of the Parish of Tangipahoa, living within the area of Road District No. 505 of Tangipahoa Parish, Louisiana, but owning no taxable property therein, or elsewhere, and that he is a member of a class of the same classification who under said laws were denied the right to vote in said election.

The allegations of petitioner's complaint admitted by the several defendants are that the proposal voted upon was submitted only to the resident property taxpayers of Road District No. 505, qualified and entitled to vote under Article XIV, Section 14(a) of the Louisiana Constitution for 1921, as amended, and L.R.S. 39:508, whereunder it is expressly provided that only property taxpayers qualified as electors under the Constitution and laws of the State are entitled to vote.

Petitioner's sole complaint is that he and others similarly situated of his class were deprived of the elective franchise in the said election solely because of their failure to own property subject to taxation, and to pay ad valorem property taxes thereon, and that they are thereby discriminated against in favor of persons who own property to be subjected to and to pay the taxes required, and that in this respect they were deprived of their rights, privileges and immunities under the Equal Protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

Plaintiff is seeking injunctive relief against the Police Jury and all of the members thereof, as well as against the Assessor and the Sheriff and Ex-Officio Tax Collector of the Parish of Tangipahoa to prevent all parties from issuing any part or all of the bonds pursuant to said election, and/or from imposing and collecting or attempting to collect a tax pursuant to the resolution of the Police Jury adopted on November 12, 1969, under the law governing said election.

The issue is for appropriate injunctive relief against all defendants and is presented to the Court by stipulation between all parties both upon the application for preliminary injunction and upon the merits.

Defendants have filed a peremptory exception of prescription based upon Article XIV, Section 14(n) of the State Constitution, and L.R.S. 39:518.

Under these provisions where sixty days have elapsed from the date of the promulgation of the results of any such election, as is here in contest, the right of any person "to contest the legality of such election, the bond issue provided for, or the tax authorized for any cause" is terminated, and the authority to issue the bonds, and the legality thereof and of the related taxes are conclusively presumed, and the Court is denied jurisdiction to inquire into such matters.

Defendants have also joined issue upon the merits.

The documents accompanying the plea of prescription as well as the pleadings and the stipulation all show that the subject election was held on June 7, 1969, and that the results were promulgated on June 10, 1969, and that the final notice was published in a newspaper of general circulation in the Parish of Tangipahoa and in the area of the Road District on June 19, 1969, more than sixty days after the date of promulgation. Thereafter, both the Constitution and the Act expressly provide that:

> 1. The legality of the election, the authority to issue the bonds and of the taxes necessary to pay the same shall be conclusively presumed;
> 2. That no person shall have any right of action to contest the legality of the said election, tax provision or bond authorization for any cause whatsoever; and
> 3. That no court shall have any authority to inquire into such matters.

Subsequent to the Constitution of 1921 and to the decision of the Supreme Court of Louisiana in the case of Roberts v. Evangeline Parish School Board, 99 So. 280, the Supreme Court of Louisiana has strictly adhered to the view that Article XIV, Section 14(n) is meant to apply to all cases, including those in which the election is attacked on the basis of the illegality or constitutionality [unconstitutionality] of the statute or ordinances under which it had been called and held.

The Supreme Court of this State as well as the Supreme Court of the United States had recognized the validity of the peremptive and prescriptive laws of the State where a reasonable opportunity to be heard in the courts was afforded the interested citizen under these laws, and where the right to be heard, if not so exercised, was to be forever lost. Gough v. LaSalle Parish School Board, 210 La. 554; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U.S. 97.

The plaintiff urges here that the rule of the cases cited has been modified, and is now to be interpreted and applied as in the recent United States Supreme Court decision in the cases of Joseph Q. Cipriano v. City of Houma, et al, 89 Sup. Ct. 1897, and the related case of Kramer v. Union Free School District No. 15, 2 Cir., 1967, 379 F.2d 491; 282 F.Supp. 70 (1968).

Fortunately the Supreme Court of the State of Louisiana in J. L. Andrieux v. East Baton Rouge Parish School Board, et al, decided on Thursday, October 23, 1969, involving a somewhat similar question, adhered to the long line of decisions shown holding that the sixty-day constitutional and statutory prescriptive period in question operates as a complete extinguishment of the right to attack bond and tax elections where the Court took into consideration the two cases mentioned. In that case, which has now become final, the Court made this statement:

> "It is stipulated that the results of the election were promulgated on February 27, 1969, and we note that this suit was not filed until September 26, 1969, long after the 60-day period had expired. We have strictly adhered to the view that the constitutional and statutory peremptive period operates as a complete extinguishment of the right to attack bond and tax elections. Roberts v. Evangeline Parish School Board, 155 La. 331, 99 So. 280 (1923); Roy v. City of Lafayette, 168 La. 1081, 123 So. 720 (1929); Miller v. Town of Bernice, 186 La. 742, 173 So. 192 (1937); Carnahan v. Police Jury of Calcasieu Parish, 199 La. 262, 5 So.2d 766 (1942); Gough v. LaSalle Parish School Board, 210 La. 554, 27 So.2d 330 (1946); Sansing v. Rapides Parish School Board, 211 La. 936, 31 So.2d 169 (1947); Browning v. Webster Parish School Board, 212 La. 139, 31 So.2d 621 (1947); Woulfe v. Morrison, 212 La. 1032, 34 So.2d 251 (1948); Dresser v. Recreation and Park Com'n, 213 La. 85, 34 So.2d 384 (1948); Harrel v. Winn Parish School Board, 214 La. 1095, 39 So.2d 743 (1949); Shadow v. Rapides Parish School Board, 220 La. 302, 56 So.2d 555 (1952); Redmon v. Sub-Sewerage District No. 1, 226 La. 245, 75 So.2d 854 (1954); McLavy v. American Legion Housing Corporation, 227 La. 300, 79 So.2d 316 (1955)."

The Court also found in that case "* * * '[Article 14, Section 14(n)] is meant to apply to all cases including those in which the election is attacked on the basis of the illegality or constitutionality [unconstitutionality] of the statutes or ordinances under which it had been called and held.' "

As to this the Supreme Court of Louisiana in that case made the following observation:

> "It is the plaintiff's position that peremption should have no application in this suit where relief is sought for alleged deprivation of constitutional rights. This contention, however, is without merit. We said in Redmon v. Sub-Sewerage District No. 1, supra, '* * * that it [Article 14, Section 14(n)] is meant to apply to all cases including those in which the election is attacked on the basis of the illegality or constitutionality [unconstitutionality] of the statutes or ordinances under which it had been called and held.' "

As to the Cipriano case the Supreme Court of Louisiana further stated:

"In support of his plea of unconstitutionality of the limited franchise the plaintiff relies on two recent United States Supreme Court cases, Kramer v. Union Free School District, 395 U.S. 621, 89 S.Ct. 1886, 23 L.Ed. 2d 583 (June 16, 1969), and Cipriano v. City of Houma, 395 U.S. 701, 89 S.Ct. 1897, 23 L.Ed.2d 647 (June 16, 1969). In these decisions, which were given only prospective effect and were decided after the lapse of the peremptive period for challenging this election, the court recognized that state prescriptive or peremptive provisions were valid as a bar to such attacks, for it said in Cipriano v. City of Houma, 395 U.S. at p. 706: 'That is, we will apply it [the decision] only where, under state law, the time for challenging the election result has not expired * * *.' (Emphasis supplied.)"

The Supreme Court in that case applying the state law did establish the sixty-day prescriptive period as to revenue bonds as of the date of the decree, in that case June 16, 1969, but in doing so the Court made it clear that the decree was to apply even as to such issues only "where the authorization to issue the securities" was not "legally complete on the date of this decision."

Despite the foregoing, the specific contention of the plaintiff here is that in the present case unlike in the Cipriano case the 60-day prescriptive or peremptive provision of Louisiana law expired on the 18th day of August, 1969, subsequent to June 16, 1969, the date of the Cipriano decree.

In the face of this decree and other decisions, the plaintiff would contend here that the exclusion of non-property taxpaying electors in a property tax election of this kind is nevertheless arbitrary and discriminating as against petitioner and persons of his class, and is not necessary to promote a compelling state interest, and that, therefore, since in the present case the 60-day prescriptive period ran subsequent to June 16, 1969, the date of the Cipriano decision, that decision is applicable and governing, and the specific cut-off date established in that case applies to a bond election of the kind here involved.

This Court is convinced that the plea of prescription filed in this case should be sustained as under the Stipulation of Fact upon which the case has been submitted the 60-day prescriptive period expired sixty days prior to the filing date of the present suit.

In the Cipriano case an electric revenue bond was involved rather than a property bond, and while it is true that the Court in that case did establish June 16, 1969, as in effect a cut-off date insofar as revenue bonds are concerned, where the authorization to issue the securities and all proceedings related thereto, were not legally complete on June 16, 1969, rather than supporting plaintiff's contention in this regard in the Cipriano case as well as in the companion case of Kramer, supra, the Supreme Court of the United States emphasized that it was dealing only with a revenue bond issue in which only property owners were permitted to vote, and made it clear beyond question that the date June 16, 1969, was to apply only to bonds of that kind, and was not to be extended to a property bond of the character here involved.

The Court iterated and reiterated that Louisiana or any other state "might in some other circumstances" limit the franchise to those primarily interested.

The constitutional law under attack in the Cipriano case was Article XIV, Section 14(f), and L.R.S. 33:4251, et seq., governing only revenue bonds; whereas, the law under attack in the present case is Article XIV, Section 14(a), and L.R.S. 39:501, et seq., governing the authorization and sale of property bonds.

In this Court's opinion in the Cipriano case where the Court considered the hardships of retroactivity where the revenue bond is involved and definitely restricted the 60-day cut-off date, June 16, 1969, to that type of bond only it would appear to the Court that while in that decision the Court did not pass upon the validity of the law of this State in respect to property bonds that it did by necessary implication rather plainly say that if and when a case of the present kind reaches that Court, and if and when the Court should conclude that the primary interest of a property owner is not such reasonable classification as warrants the restriction of the franchise to only qualified taxpaying electors, the Court will apply the prescriptive period arising under Article XIV, Section 14(n), and will make its decree prospective as to cases of this kind.

What the Supreme Court of the United States specifically said in the Cipriano case was that in the case of a revenue bond property owners did not have any special pecuniary interest allowing for any different classification from that of an ordinary qualified voter.

The Court said:

> "* * * Assuming arguendo that a State might in some circumstances constitutionally limit the franchise to qualified voters who are also 'specially interested' in the election, whether the statute allegedly so limiting the franchise denies equal protection of the laws to those otherwise qualified voters who are excluded depends on 'whether all those excluded are in fact substantially less interested or affected than those the statute includes.' Id., at 11.

"At the time of the election, only about 40% of the city's registered voters were property taxpayers. Of course, the operation of the utility systems—gas, water, and electric—affects virtually every resident of the city, nonproperty owners as well as property owners. All users pay utility bills, and the rates may be affected substantially by the amount of revenue bonds outstanding. Certainly property owners are not alone in feeling the impact of bad utility service or high rates, or in reaping the benefits of good service and low rates.

"The revenue bonds are to be paid only from the operations of the utilities; they are not financed in any way by property tax revenue. Property owners, like nonproperty owners, use the utilities and pay the rates; however, the impact of the revenue bond issue on them is unconnected to their status as property taxpayers. Indeed, the benefits and burdens of the bond issue fall indiscriminately on property owner and non-property owner alike."

In evaluating the foregoing and the significance of the sixty day prescriptive period applied in that case the point is to be further emphasized that in Cipriano and in the companion case of Kramer "the sole issue," as it was put in the Cipriano case, "in this case is the constitutionality of the provisions of Louisiana law permitting only property taxpayers to vote in utility bond elections," and in that case as in Kramer the Court found "it unnecessary to decide whether a state might in some circumstances [as in the case of a property bond] limit the franchise to those primarily interested," thus emphasizing a distinction restricting the interpretation to be given the Cipriano decree to the strictly revenue bond issue that was there involved.

In the Kramer case the Court was dealing only with the right of petitioner to participate as a qualified elector in exercising his inherent right to vote in an election where a school board member of the area in which he was residing was to be elected. This was strictly a political election in respect to which an entirely different question was presented from the issue involved here; that is, the proprietary or governmental power provided for under the Constitution and laws of Louisiana to impose a tax upon the qualified taxpaying electors called upon to pay to carry out a road improvement program.

The distinction between the governmental or political and the proprietary functions of a political subdivision such as the obligation to provide and to maintain good roads has long been recognized as a valid basis for limiting the right to vote to certain members of the electorate who are primarily involved.

In respect to the latter the courts of this nation have consistently emphasized the fact that a political subdivision such as a municipality or a road district has no inherent right as a governmental function to incur debt and to issue bonds for that purpose, except as is otherwise authorized by the Constitution and laws of the State, and that the effect of voting and issuing bonds is to increase taxes and expenditures, and that in doing so the lawmakers in providing the method may deem it proper and indeed necessary to direct that before such added burden may be undertaken by the elected officials, a majority of those who must bear it should express their approval. Carville v. McBride, 202 Pac. 802 (Nev. 1922); Spahon v. Mayor and Councilmen of Savannah Beach, Georgia, 207 F.Supp. 688 (1962); Sailors v. Kent Board of Education, 387 U.S. 105 (1967).

The distinction is well put by the court in Carville v. McBride, supra, where the court reiterated the well recognized distinction that runs through the whole jurisprudence between a governmental (political) function where the basic principle of "one man, one vote" is to be applied, and the constitutional authority to exercise a proprietary or business function as is true where debts are incurred and bonds are authorized in connection with public utilities and public services where the issue is to be decided by a majority of those who must pay the cost. The court put it like this:

> "The one legislative, public, governmental, in the exercise of which it is a sovereignty and governs its people; the other, proprietary, quasi private, conferred upon it not for the purpose of governing its people, but for the private advantage of the inhabitants of the city and of the city as a legal entity."

The United States Supreme Court has often held that the states have broad power to make classifications as long as the distinction is a rational one. Levy v. Louisiana, 391 U.S. 68 (1968). The result of a long line of cases is summarized as follows:

> "While a state has broad power when it comes to making classifications (case cited) it may not draw a line which constitutes an invidious discrimination against a particular class (case cited). Though the test has been variously stated, the end result is whether the line drawn is a rational one." Id. at 71; See also Avery v. Midland County, 390 U.S. 474 at 484 (1968).

The test has been aptly stated to be that a legislative classification is invalid only ". . . if the classification rests on grounds wholly irrelevant to achievement of the State's objective." McGown v. Maryland, 366 U.S. 420, 425 (1960); Kotch v. Board of River Port Pilot Comm'rs., 330 U.S. 552, 556 (1946).

In applying the test ". . . we must consider the facts and circumstances of the law, the interests which the State claims to be protecting, and interests of those who are disadvantaged by the classification." Williams v. Rhodes, 393 U.S. 23, 30 (1968).

The classification under the Constitution and laws of Louisiana governing a property bond election would appear to this Court to be fully justified under the above principles.

The objective of the State of Louisiana in limiting the right to vote in tax bond elections to property taxpayers is the protection of those taxpayers from arbitrary and excessive taxation. There is no limit to either the dollar amount of taxes or millage which may be levied against property taxpayers in Louisiana for payment of principal and interest on the type of bond issue involved in this litigation. These bonds are secured by "unlimited ad valorem taxation." Since the property taxpayers are unprotected by any statutory tax ceiling in these situations, they could be subject to arbitrary, exessive and even confiscatory taxation absent some type of control vested in those same property taxpayers who are most directly affected by such taxes.

The objective under the Louisiana law in protecting this segment of its citizens by imposing some limit on the property tax is legitimate and the classification of voters made by the State of Louisiana is not "wholly irrelevant to achievement" of this objective, but is wholly relevant and justifiable. The basic concept of the provision of the Louisiana Constitution (Article 14, §14(a), Louisiana Constitution of 1921) limiting the voting in property tax bond elections to property taxpayers first appeared in the Louisiana Constitution of 1898 (Articles 281 and 291) and has been retained in Louisiana's Constitution ever since (Article 281, Louisiana Constitution of 1913, Op.Cit. supra).

The interests of the property taxpayers in having some protection against arbitrary and excessive taxation surely outweigh the interests of non-property taxpayers in a non-political election to authorize the issuance of tax secured bonds. Thus, based upon the traditional test of Equal Protection and Due Process as discussed herein, it is submitted that the method of voting provided by Louisiana law is constitutional and violates neither the Equal Protection clause nor the Due Process clause of the Federal Constitution.

While the United States Supreme Court did at least by necessary legal implication sustain the 60-day prescriptive period that has expired in this case, the United States Supreme Court in that case as well as in the Kramer decision made it emphatic that it was unnecessary in those cases to decide whether a state might in some circumstances limit the franchise to those primarily interested. Thus, the constitutional question as to the validity of the Louisiana law may remain open, but on the other hand, the distinction relevant to the plea of prescription here is emphatic in this reservation where in the Cipriano case the Court expressly made the following statement:

> "As we noted in Kramer, supra, if a challenged state statute grants the right to vote in a limited purpose election to some otherwise qualified voters and denies it to others, 'the Court must determine whether the exclusions are necessary to promote a compelling state interest.' " (Underlining added.)

It is made plain in that case that in determining the compelling state interest in a revenue bond case that the Supreme Court took into account the nature of the tax, the manner of imposition, the procedure for the collection, and the question of ultimate liability for the operation of the power system, and for the payment of the bonds in principal and interest. Thus, it appears almost too convincing to be denied that if there is a case where the primary interest in the outcome of the election is to be considered as having to do with reasonable and constitutional classifications that would justify restriction upon the voting franchise to property owners, it would be in a property tax election of the kind involved in this suit.

The need for stress as to classification becomes revelant here to a proper disposal of this case in justifying the position of the defendant that the Supreme Court of the United States did not interpret the sixty day prescriptive law of Louisiana in the Cipriano decree so as to make it applicable to a property bond election of the kind here involved. On the contrary the Court made it clear that the decree was to apply only to revenue issues, and even in cases of that kind only "where the authorization to issue" the securities "was not legally complete on the date" of that decision.

In doing this the Court considered, too, the significant hardships to be imposed on cities, bondholders and others as to matters of this kind "if," as the Court put it, "our decision today were given full retroactive effect," thus emphasizing the restrictive ruling shown.

As to this the Court said:

> " * * * Where a decision of this Court could produce substantial inequitable results if applied retroactively, there is ample basis in our cases for avoiding the 'injustice or hardship' by holding of nonretroactivity. Great Northern R. Co. v. Sunburst Oil & Refining Co., 287 U.S. 358, 364 (1932). See Chicot County Drainage Dist. v. Baxter State Bank, 308 U.S. 371 (1940). Cf. Linkletter v. Walker, 381 U.S. 618 (1965) * * * "

Further justifying the defendants' position here as to the distinctive classification of a property bond it is shown that from the first appearance in Louisiana of constitutional authorization to vote public debt secured by ad valorem taxation, the right to vote has been delegated to property owning qualified electors. Such citizens must vote affirmatively, not only in number of votes cast but in assessed valuation. The assessed valuation is based on the last completed tax roll against which, in the following years, such ad valorem taxes would be computed and allocated. The Constitution of 1921 was drafted and put into effect as authorized by Act 180 of 1920, adopted by the qualified electors of the State at an election held November 2, 1920. A provision similar to the requirement of Article 14, Section 14(a) (qualified taxpaying voters) was contained in the previous Constitution in effect of date 1898.

This Court is also aware that Louisiana law requires that "all property situated within the state . . . shall be subject to taxation" (except such as is expressly exempted) (L.R.S. 47:1951.) Article 10 provides exemptions for automobiles, household furniture, private libraries, musical instruments, drapes and rugs as well as other movable furnishings in the house. Other movable items of property owned by citizens are not subject to these exemptions. Under L.R.S. 47:1956, each citizen is required to fill out a list of his taxable property including movable property not exempt, make oath to its correctness and return such list to the Parish Assessor. Most qualified electors meeting the residence requirements of Article 8, Section 1 (one year) would have accumulated at least some personal or movable property subject to assessment, taxation and the required filing of the list under the above-cited statute.

As to the peremptory plea of prescription relied upon in this case the most that can be said as to the decree of the Supreme Court of the United States in the Cipriano case is that if a case of this kind should reach that Court and the Court adheres to its ruling in that case the Court will in any event make its decision prospective, and thus, will protect multiple vital public improvement property bonds of the kind here involved, where the 60-day prescription has elapsed prior to contest.

The law recently reiterated by the Louisiana Supreme Court in the case of J. L. Andrieux v. East Baton Rouge Parish School Board, et al, is plainly governing here as to the plea of prescription, and this Court will accordingly sign a judgment in this case sustaining the plea of prescription, and dismissing the suit at plaintiff's cost.

SUPREME COURT OF LOUISIANA

v.

No. 50,244

ROAD DISTRICT NO. 505
of TANGIPAHOA PARISH, LOUISIANA ET AL.

APPEAL FROM THE TWENTY-FIRST JUDICIAL DISTRICT COURT FOR THE PARISH OF TANGIPAHOA, STATE OF LOUISIANA; HONORABLE WILLIAM M. DAWKINS, JUDGE

HAMITER, Justice.

In this suit, brought against Road District No. 505 of Tangipahoa Parish, Louisiana, and also against the Police Jury and certain named officials of such parish, Strick Chambers challenges the validity or legality of a bond and tax election called by the governing authority of the Road District and held on June 7, 1969.

The plaintiff is a non-property owning resident, but a qualified elector of the parish; and, as such, he represents (besides himself) others of a class similarly situated. In his petition it is urged that he and the other members of the class were discriminated against in the bond and tax election by virtue of their not having been permitted to vote in the election which approved the issuance of the bonds, this because they did not own taxable property in the parish. He relies primarily on two cases recently decided by the United States Supreme Court, namely: Kramer v. Union Free School District No. 15, et al., ____ U. S. ____, 23 L. Ed. 2d 583 and Cipriano v. City of Houma, et al., ____ U. S. ____, 23 L. Ed. 2d 647 (hereinafter discussed).

All defendants tendered a plea of peremption alleging that plaintiff's action is barred by virtue of the provisions of Article 14, Section 14(n) of the Louisiana Constitution, and of L.R.S. 39:518. They also filed an answer. Later, the entire case was submitted to the district court on a stipulation of facts.

The court maintained the plea of peremption and dismissed the suit at plaintiff's costs. Plaintiff is appealing.

Here, the case was submitted on a joint motion pursuant to Section 8, Rule VIII, of the Rules of this court.

The constitutional and statutory provisions relied on by defendants to support their plea of peremption authorize suits to contest the legality of bond and tax elections; but they also establish a peremptive period of sixty days from the date of promulgation of the returns of the election, during which period such suits can be brought. They declare, however, that if no suit is filed within such period of sixty days the legality of the election is conclusively presumed, and no court shall have authority to inquire into the matter.

The election here involved was conducted in compliance with the Constitution and laws of Louisiana, and the results were promulgated on June 19, 1969. The instant suit was not filed until November 14, 1969, almost five months after the promulgation and three months after the peremptive period had expired.

The plaintiff in Andrieux v. East Baton Rouge Parish School Board, et al., No. 50, 160 of the Docket of this Court, attacked a similar bond and tax election on the same ground as urged by petitioner here. Therein we again reiterated our consistent holding that "the constitutional and statutory peremptive period operates as a complete extinguishment of the right to attack bond and tax elections," it prohibiting thereafter a contest over such elections for any cause whatsoever. See also Gough v. LaSalle Parish School Board, 210 La. 554, 27 So.2d 330, Harrel v. Winn Parish School Board, 214 La. 1095, 39 So.2d 743, Redmon v. Sub-Sewerage District No. of Sewerage District No. 1, Parish of Jefferson, 226 La. 245, 75 So.2d 854, and McLavy v. American Legion Housing Corporation, et al., 227 La. 300, 79 So.2d 316. (Other cases enunciating this principle are cited in Andrieux v. East Baton Rouge Parish School Board, et al., supra.)

Inasmuch as the present litigation was not commenced within sixty days after the promulgation of the result of the bond and tax election involved herein the trial judge properly sustained defendants' exception of peremption and dismissed the suit.

We do not agree with plaintiff's counsel that the rendition of the decisions in Cipriano v. Houma, et al., and Kramer v. Union Free School District No. 15, et al., both supra, by the United States Supreme Court on June 16, 1969, in any manner affects the result reached by us. To the contrary, we think that the language of the court in both cases specifically recognizes that in order for the holdings to apply the suit attacking the validity of the bond and tax election must be brought within the state's peremptive period.

In the Cipriano case, after holding that in some instances the denial of the right to vote to persons situated as this plaintiff might result in the nullity of the election (as it did there), the court announced its intention to apply the decision only prospectively. But it said: "That is, we will apply it only where under state law, the time for challenging the election result has not expired, or in cases brought within the time specified by state law and which are not yet final. * * * Incidentally, that suit had been filed within the state's sixty-day peremptive period. (Underscoring ours.)

As we observed in Andrieux v. East Baton Rouge Parish School Board, et al., supra, the United States Supreme Court in the two cases relied on by plaintiff "recognized that state prescriptive or peremptive provisions were valid as a bar to such attacks."

For the reasons assigned the judgment of the district court sustaining defendants' plea of peremption and dismissing the suit at plaintiff's costs is affirmed. Costs of this court are assessed against plaintiff.
